Six apply for vacant board seat

Six West Sacramento residents applied to be appointed to a soon-vacant seat on the Washington Unified School District board of trustees.

The six each provided a brief statement of interest and qualifcations to the district by Monday's deadline.

They are, with information provided largely from their own statements:

■ Juan Barcenas, a 16-year city resident and a local police officer. Barcenas served as the school resource police officer (a position funded partly by the police department and partly by funds obtained by the schools) from 1993 to 1997, until he was transferred from school duty against his will.

Barcenas has a daughter who graduated from the district.

■ Joseph Frank de Leon, 41, who is a graduate of West Sacramento schools. De Leon states that he has 23 years experience in management is experienced supervising large groups of people.

■ Edward R. Hocking, a complaint investigator for the state department of alcohol and drug programs, who has an associate arts degree from Sacramento City College in business administration.

Hocking is a past member of several school and civic committees including site councils for Westmore Oaks Elementary School and Bryte Elementary School, and the Golden State Middle School Band Boosters. He is president of the River City High School parent club and a member of the city parks and community services commission.

Together in protest

The REV. JESSE JACKSON (center), a nationally known civil rights activist since the era of Martin Luther King, Jr., brings his marchers out of West Sacramento towards the Tower Bridge and a rally at the state capitol Monday morning. Jackson was protesting California's Prop. 209, which repealed the state's affirmative action policies -- and was itself called a "civil rights initiative." The banner carried by Jackson's group invoke's King's famous "I have a dream" speech.

About a thousand people participated in the walk east on West Sacramento's West Capitol Ave. from a staging area on Meadowdale Park, and they were joined by several thousand more rally members on the Sacramento side of the bridge. One Sacramento newspaper estimate put the final tally at 5,000 people in Sacramento. Besides the Anti-Prop. 209 activists, others participating in the march supported such causes as the labor movement and the movement to legalize certain casino games under the auspices of Native American tribes.

Local streets, including the Jefferson Blvd. offramps from the freeway, were closed or controlled to make way for the peaceful and warm-tempered protest march.

City protests radioactive transport

Feds unlikely to change plans to move nuclear wastes by rail

By Steve Marschke

With a city council proclamation and letters to President Clinton and his secretary of energy, West Sacramento officials have voiced their opposition to plans to bring spent nuclear fuel rods through the city as one part of the radioactive waste's long journey to special disposal sites in Georgia and Idaho.

The city joins other jurisdictions along the proposed path of the special trains in opposition to the plan.

Bill Summers, the hazardous materials specialist for the West Sacramento Fire Dept., said he does not believe the federal government plans to reconsider its plan, though. Summers authored the proclamation adopted by the city council in opposition to the plan.

"As far as I know, the decision is not subject to change," he stated. "Sometime between February and as late as May, they will bring their first shipment into the Concord Naval Station."

If the trains are used as planned, about five tons of a total of 20 tons in foreign nuclear reactor waste to enter U.S. soil will do so at the Concord Naval Station, where it will be loaded onto special trains for a trip eastward. The material will comprise about five train shipments over the next 13 years through Yolo County.

"The Department of Energy's preferred route is to put it on rail and send it through Davis,, West Sacramento, Roseville and the Feather River area" on its way to points east, said Summers.

The used fuel rods are encased in heavy, protective casings, "but if it were unshielded, it would possibly be deadly," he explained. "They load them into a cask which has holes in it for taking the rods. Each cask weighs 20 tons and is difficult to breach."

The casks are rimmed with eight inches of stainless steel and lead for protection. Some of the wastes could be used for making nuclear weapons, Summers added.

Due to the casks' weight and their "difficulty to breach," the danger of terrorists hijacking some of the radioactive material is fairly remote, although "there always would be that worry," said Summers.

Among the security measures to be taken for the special trains is notification to local agencies only a few hours before each train moves through their jurisdictions.

America's acceptance of the foreign nuclear waste stems from a Cold War-era program sponsored by the Eisenhower administration, called "Atoms for Peace." As a way of encouraging the use of nuclear power in friendly countries, the U.S. agreed to dispose of the reactors' waste.

"Nuclear reactors around the world have used up these fuel rods," explained Summers. "Because of the lack of protective facilities to store it, they decided to bring it back into the U.S."

The trains would enter West Sacramento via the tracks on the north side of the Yolo Causeway from Davis, cross over Harbor Blvd. and over the Sacramento River and travel eastward into Sacramento County.

The use of trains has been preferred as a safer and more effective way to haul the radioactive wastes than trucks.

Auditions next week:

Attention actors: Woodland stage beckons

The Woodland Opera House will hold open auditions for their production of "Steel Magnolias" by Robert Harling, Monday and Tuesday, November 3 and 4 at 7 p.m. The production will play January 30-February 21. The Teichert Foundation is the underwriter for the play.

The play, set entirely in a small Louisiana town beauty shop, has roles for six women: Truvy is the owner of the salon which serves as the center of gossip and mutual support for the women of the town.

She hires Annelle, a young newcomer to town. M'Lynn is one of her customers and her daughter, Shelby, is getting married soon.

Clairee is the newly widowed grand lady of town and Ouiser if the neighborhood grouch who isn't mad, she's just "been in a bad mood for 40 years."

Auditions will consist of cold readings from the script. No appointments are necessary. The play if directed by Lydia Venables.

Area code change for Yolo set to begin Nov. 1

An area code change involving all of Yolo County -- except West Sacramento -- will soon be in effect.

Davis, Woodland and the rest of Yolo County, as well as much of the northern area currently in the "916" area code, are moving into the new "530" telephone area code. West Sacramento, like its closest neighbor, Sacramento, will remain in the old "916" area code.

Between Nov. 1 and May 16, either area code will work to dial telephones in the area switching over to "530." After May 16, the new area codes alone can be used.

The city of Dixon has been moved into the "707" area code.

Utilities professionals suggest local residents and businesses re-program any speed dialing telephone numbers they have for areas due to switch their area codes.

Join county task force on welfare reform

From Meg Sheldon, Director of Social Services
Yolo County

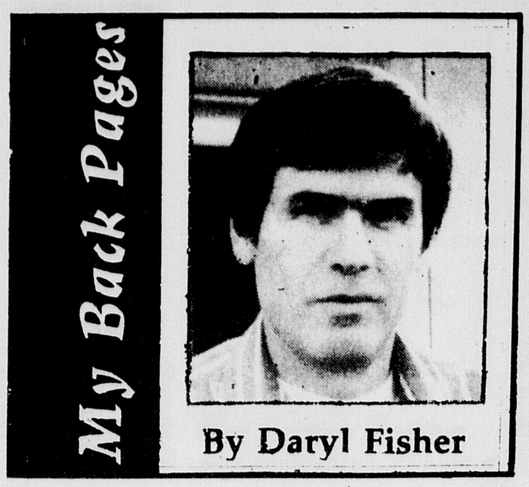

The Yolo County Board of Supervisors is seeking applications from citizens interested in serving on the Welfare Reform Task Force. This citizen advisory group will learn about state and federal Welfare Reform law, work with groups of staff from the county and services providers to develop Yolo County's approach to Welfare Reform, conduct public forums, and make final recommendations to the Board of Supervisors.

The Board of Supervisors is seeking representatives of the public which have an interest in the success of Welfare Reform in Yolo County. Possible affiliations include, but are not limited to: cities, churches, current and past welfare recipients, migrant workers, labor, higher education, primary and secondary education, community based organizations, refugees, and legal services. In addition to community representatives, the Task Force will include one member from each of the county's nine health and human services citizen advisory committees and one appointee by each member of the Board of Supervisors.

The Task Force will function for approximately six months, beginning in December 1997 and continuing through May 1998. Meetings will be held at times and locations that are convenient for Task Force members and provide an opportunity for the public to participate.

Interested persons should contact Meg Sheldon at the Yolo County Department of Social Services at 661-2763 for an application and/or more information. Completed applications must be submitted to the Department of Social Services by November 13, 1997.

The bottom line of the 'Save the Dream' march

Last Monday morning the Rev. Jesse Jackson and hundreds of his loyal supporters used West Sacramento's Meadowdale Park as a staging area for their "Save the Dream" march to the State Capitol. As they slowly crossed the Tower Bridge, they were enthusiastically joined by thousands of other like-minded citizens, and with a colorful group of American Indian dancers in full cultural dress leading the way, the marchers very orderly descended upon Capitol Park.

As I mingled among the crowd, which appeared to be between five and ten thousand people strong, I was struck by its energy and diversity. When I mentioned to a hispanic woman standing next to me that I had never seen so many people of color gathered in one place before, she smiled and said, "What poor Governor Wilson doesn't understand is that this is California's future. By 2025, the whole state is going to look like this."

There were colorful signs and placards everywhere, but one particular hand-held banner grabbed my attention. It was being carried by a group of nicely attired middle-aged caucasian men and it read, "Angry White Guys For Affirmative Action". I stepped over to the one gentleman who appeared to be the most approachable and bravely asked, "So, just what is `Angry White Guys For Affirmative Action'?"

"We're a national organization," softly came the answer, "and we're here today to lend what support we can to the millions of other Californians who think the passage of Proposition 209 was a terrible travesty."

"But it passed with 54 percent of the vote," I reminded the gentle-voiced demonstrator. "That's a pretty solid majority in today's world."

"I voted for Richard Nixon in 1968 and 1972," he said almost apologetically. "Voters can be wrong, you know."

As our conversation continued, I learned that "Angry White Guys For Affirmative Action" believe that most opponents of affirmative action aren't really all that concerned with the social props on which caucasian men have long depended. "No," explained the little man holding up his end of the banner, "I'm afraid it's not affirmative action itself, but affirmative action for women and people of color that is under attack."

He then handed me a piece of literature which read in part, "We hear a lot about angry white males today who want to do away with affirmative action. Well, we too are angry white males. But contrary to the caricature, we support affirmative action. As white men whose own families got free medical care, unquestioned access to higher education through the GI Bill, and the general social uplift of the New Deal, we support affirmative action for those who are still left out. We are not tear-jerk liberals, or millionaires who can afford to appear magnanimous. It is out of our own self-interest, as direct beneficiaries of social engineering ourselves, that we support programs of inclusion. Affirmative action is already part of the fabric of American life. We are all bound together in a vast network of affirmative action, of mutual support systems we take for granted. It is hypocritical and profoundly wrong to call affirmative action for minorities "racism in reverse" while treating affirmative action for bankers, farmers and white men of power, as entitlements."

When I finished reading the man asked me, "Do you know what the first really big affirmative action debate was about?"

"No," I admitted.

"It was about college students who were getting draft deferments during the Vietnam war. People forget that minorities were over-represented in that war. Black and brown kids were being sent to do most of the fighting and dying while primarily white college youth were safe at home building their own careers with the help of affirmative action -- which was called college draft deferments back then."

Suddenly, another demonstrator, this one a young African-American woman carrying a huge black and white framed photograph of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., accidentally stumbled into the "Angry White Guys For Affirmative Action" banner, quickly read it, smiled, and said, "Hey, I like it! I like it!"

"Thanks," said the man who had been talking to me.

"It looks like we're all here for the same reason, doesn't it?" she added.

"What's that?" he asked, returning her smile.

"To try and find a way to stop treating each other like crap!"

Farmer's statement of qualifications was not immediately available. He is a veteran member of the West Sacramento Police Department, where he currently holds the rank of lieutenant.

The school board expects to choose one of the six candidates in a process scheduled to begin last night, and ending with an appointment by Nov. 18.

The winner will fill the final year of the term now filled by Nancy Thompson-Candee, who will resign next month for personal reasons. Continuing board members will be Ardeen Westvik, Irene Eklund, Pat Flint and Hal Williams.

The next regularly scheduled school board election will be in November of 1998, and the newly appointed board member will be holding one of the seats up in that election.

Jr. Midgets win conference

From Rick Barrett
West Sac Bears

The West Sacramento Jr. Midget Bears became Metro Conference champions with a 31-0 victory over the Cordova Lancers this past Sunday. The Bears thus finish the regular season with a 7-1 record, and earn a playoff berth on November 8 against the arch-rival Laguna Cardinals.

West Sac took the opening kickoff and drove the length of the field, with Zeke Butcher culminating a 63-yard march on a 3-yard scoring run behind the fine blocking of Tommy Guerra and Pudge Falllon, Cordova blocked Richard Alpers' kick attempt and the Bears led 6-0 early in the game.

Offensive standouts included Steven Stephens, Dominique Norris, Anthony Santos, Butcher, Bush and Fonbuena as West Sac recorded their fourth shutout of the year. Now the playoffs start, and its do-or-die time; one loss and they're out. West Sacramento also had two other teams win their divisions and qualify for the playoffs, as both the Pee-Wees and the Midgets get ready for postseason play.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The baseball season is over and the Florida Marlins are the 1997 World Champions. The Marlins and Indians played their hearts out in this crazy seven game series. The Marlins won game seven, 3-2 in 11 innings, with their 25th victory this year in their final at-bat. The MVP of the series went to a 22-year-old rookie picture from Cuba. Livan Hernandez, who defected from Cuba two years ago, started and won two games but had an era of 5.27.

The MVP award should have been given to Moises Alou, who hit three home runs and batted .321 and drove in nine runs or catcher Charles Johnson who hit .357.

The 49ers had an easy time with the Saints down at the Big Easy in New Orleans. The Niners (7-1) shut out the Saints 23-0 as they prepare to host the Cowboys (4-4) next Sunday at 3 Com Park. The Boys lost to Philly 13-12 last Sunday and head to San Francisco with their QB Troy Aikman banged up and their offense having trouble scoring in the red zone. The 49ers defense has yet to allow a rushing touchdown this year!

Something has got to give, either Emmitt Smith will have his best day of the year or the 49ers No. 1 defense will continue to shut down the run. The second half of the season will prove if the Niners do have the best defense in the league. In the first half of the season, San Francisco has faced five offenses rated Nos. 22, 26, 27, 28 and 30 in the league. In the second half of the season, the 49ers will face offenses that are ranked No. 1 (Seahawks), No. 2 (Broncos), No. 3 (Eagles), and No. 4 (Vikings). Dallas will be the first test.

49ers 28, Dallas 17.

The Raiders' offense scored 34 points against the Seahawks last Sunday, but their defense, which is rated last in the N.F.L., gave up 45 points. Their secondary allowed Seattle's 42-year old QB Warren Moon to throw for over 400 yards and five TDs. The Raiders (3-5), who always seem to find a way to lose, travel Sunday to Carolina (4-4) to play the Panthers. I have to go with the Panthers this week because I'm tired of picking the Raiders to win.

Panthers 24, Raiders 23.

The Sacramento Kings home opener is Sunday, Nov. 2 against the Houston Rockets. The Kings roster may see some major changes with Mitch Richmond being the trade talk of the NBA and Lionel Simmons facing retirement.

See ya next week!

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial:

Is this book fit for the classroom?

The River City High School "Review" newspaper reports this week that some local residents wish to remove a particular novel from the school curriculum due to its alleged encouragement of bad language and immoral behavior. This may or may not turn into a large controversy in the Washington Unified School District.

The district has responded to the request by creating a committee to study the allegations and help decide on the merit of the book, "Ordinary People," written by Judith Guest. The book is part of an optional course at the school and is not required reading for all students.

There is nothing wrong with seeking the opinions of this commission and measuring it against the charges made by critics of the book, as long as the commission is not used as an excuse by district administration to avoid taking a leadership role in the debate.

The chief questions which need to be addressed following the report of the committee are:

What are the district's standards for selecting books for study?

Are these standards appropriate, or do they need to be changed?

Does "Ordinary People" fit these standards?

It is difficult to please everyone when planning a curriculum, and many truly valuable books contain language or actions that are inappropriate for students to copy. Yet they are not inappropriate for students to learn from; there is a difference. One classic example often cited for censorship in schools is Mark Twain's landmark "Huckleberry Finn," which was sprinkled liberally with the currently notorious "n-word" and yet stood out for its enlightened, humanitarian treatment of race issues. Some misguided souls frequently call for the removal of this book from schools because they are uncomfortable with this language and treatment. Yet the dialogue in this book were consistent with the era -- even if the attitude of tolerance was less prevalent -- and any American deprived of a chance to read it ought to feel cheated.

Sometimes there is a clear "yes" or "no" answer to this type of censorship challenge, and in the current case, the Washington Unified School District should check its facts and then present that clear answer.

Board vacancy

The WUSD board of education is in the process of choosing a new Board member to serve until the November 1998 election to fill the seat vacated by the resignation of Nancy Thompson-Candee.

Last night, the Board will have firmed up a process which includes open public interviews. The Board will, it is hoped, have announced the criteria for rating: How much have the candidates participated in the Board decision making process, how long have they lived in the district, what is their knowledge of the Board of Education's powers and duties, what is their understanding of shared governance, how much time do they have to devote to this position, and other questions.

However the Board rates the candidates, the voters will, come November '98, rate the appointee and also those who applied for the job. The one for participation and a voting record; the others, on how their continued participation in the Board meetings and in school discussions.

As one individual, I would have supported the Board going the way of the special election; in a democracy, elections are of great importance. Election by mail would be a great way to go. Further, hanging over the replacement process and the choice is the future of any bond issue for the school.

If the appointment is perceived as some kind of "done deal" with a quid pro quo, a vote for a secure majority, then bond issues will continue to go down.

Joey, Katie and Todd will be performing your bypass.

Before you know it, these kids will be doctors, nurses and medical technicians, possibly yours.

They'll need an excellent grasp of laser technology, advanced computing and molecular genetics. Unfortunately, very few American children are being prepared to master such sophisticated subjects.

If we want children who can handle tomorrow's good jobs, more kids need to take more challenging academic courses.

To find out how you can help the effort to raise standards in America's schools, please call 1-800-96-PROMISE. If we make changes now, we can prevent a lot of pain later on.

Redevelopment &
Housing Agency
City of West Sacramento

You've been reading a lot about the redevelopment agency in the newspaper lately. You can't figure out how or why they do what they do...You've heard something about tax increment dollars and that they can be used to help finance city projects like street widenings and fire trucks but can't be used to pay for something near and dear to your own interests. How come? Answers to these and other redevelopment questions will be answered at the Introduction to Redevelopment Workshop sponsored by the West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency, to be held on Saturday, November 15 from 8:30 a.m. to 2:05 p.m. at City Hall, 2101 Stone Blvd.

The workshop will focus on various aspects of redevelopment including the need for redevelopment, financing, project implementation, housing provisions and legal requirements. The idea for the training was spawned by city commissioners interested in learning more about the redevelopment process.

The event is open to the public, however, reservations are required and space is limited. Please call the redevelopment agency at 373-5843 by Wednesday, November 12 to reserve a space. Seats will be available on a first come, first served basis. A boxed lunch, workshop materials and redevelopment handbook will be provided for $5.

Additional team members who were tested on subjects ranging from mystery powders to astronomy included:

Allison Ayala; Hilary Banard; Rachel Banard; Patrick Beebe; Eddie Mitsutani; and Michael Santillano.

Sixth grade teacher and science mentor, Mrs. Del Parr, worked hard preparing the candidates for the contest.

A supportive cast of parents, siblings and classmates were on hand to cheer the team to victory.

Forum tackles a 'vision for future seniors'

From the
Davis Senior Center

The political impact of an aging population. New laws. New medical techniques and new approaches to health care. New challenges for today's Baby Boomers.

All these issues and more will be examined during the Davis Senior Center's 25th anniversary forum entitled, "2020: A Vision for Future Seniors." Registration is still open for the forum, which will be held Saturday, November 1, from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the senior center.

"This is the last and most important event of our 25th anniversary year," said Bill Sims, chairman of the event. "While our other events this year were heavily oriented toward those who already are senior citizens, this forum should be of especial interest to those who will become seniors in the next 25 years."

Pre-registration for the forum, at a cost of $5, is available through noon on Friday, October 31. Registration at the door will be $7.50. Both include a box lunch. Those interested may call 757-5696.

Complaints filed against novel

Two separate petitions filed against* Ordinary People, *novel on tenth grade core reading list.

By Rishi Sharma
Editor in Chief

The Joy Christian Ministries and Stanley Butler have both petitioned the Washington Unified School District for reconsideration of a book: Judith Guest's novel Ordinary People, on the core reading list for tenth grade.

The Joy Christian Ministries complaint filed by J.C. Myers III requests that the novel be removed from the district reading list because "it promotes immorality, covetousness, blasphemy, rebellion against authority, unnatural affection, incontinence, sexual harassment, and violence."

The second complaint alleges that the book "sends a mixed message about the use of profanity...The text is full of language that is prohibited in schools." Mr. Butler also asks that the novel be removed from the district reading program.

Mr. Patrick Campbell, Associate Superintendent of Educational Services, has appointed a committee composed of two teachers, one principal, one parent, one school librarian, and one student to evaluate the novel and make recommendations on the requests to the School Board.

The School Board will make a final decision concerning the requests.

Quad set for Red Ribbon Week celebration today

By Lisa Galvez
Staff writer

October 23-31, River City will hold its first-ever celebration of Red Ribbon Week.

According to the 1996 educators packet, Red Ribbon Week is "a celebration that began in 1985 when Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena was murdered by drug traffickers in Mexico.

Red Ribbons are worn and displayed during national Red Ribbon Week to demonstrate a visible and unified commitment to the creation of a drug-free America."

In addition to River City's usual red wristbands, in our classes we will have tobacco use and prevention incorporated into our lessons. In some classes there might be videos or games.

Students decorated the quad in red today for our very own Red Ribbon Week celebration to create awareness concerning the problems related to use of tobacco, alcohol and other drugs, and to support healthy, productive, drug-free lifestyles.

"Ms.Connolly, the French teacher on campus, said,"Red Ribbon Week is a good idea and I wish we did more with it in the classroom."

Allison Rogers, a senior, also shared her feelings on Red Ribbon Week. She said, "Red Ribbon Week is a great idea and hopefully it will help to educate a lot of students who don't know the effects of tobacco and other substances."

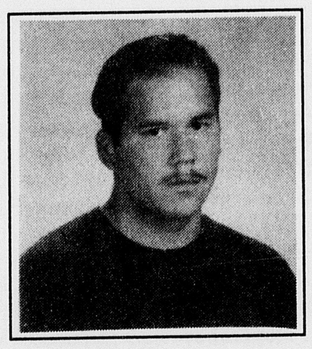

Of course, the red wristbands are still available to signify your commitment to a tobacco alcohol and drug-free life.

Jose Peralta and Andrea Alcanter win Mexican-American scholastic award

Andrea Alcanter hopes other cultures adopt a similar program to encourage students to get good grades.

By Sultan Yusufzai
Staff Writer

River City High School recently chose two of its finest Mexican-American seniors, Jose Peralta and Andrea Alcanter, to receive an award from the Mexican-American Concilio of Yolo County. These students had to demonstrate excellence in the academic field.

Each of them were awarded plaques and were recognized for their hard work in school. In addition, a group photo was sent to each of their homes.

The award night was October 11, 1997. It celebrated the 14th annual Concilio of Yolo County Community Recognition Dinner-Dance.

Jose Peralta had the highest grade point average of all the recipients.

Both Jose Peralta and Andrea Alcanter support the goals of the Concilio's program.

Andrea Alcanter said, "Other cultures should get involved in programs like this so students are encouraged to get good grades."

"It is good to have programs like this so students that work hard are recognized in their culture and community," said Jose Peralta.

Mr. Ira McKee, Sarom Phoung, and Amy Lynch win October Raider of the Month

From Jennifer Redmond and Yulia Suprun, ASB Commissioners of Campus Affairs

October teacher Chinese food fan

The Teacher of the Month is Mr. McKee, the incredibly well-liked electronics and drivers' education teacher. He is a graduate of San Francisco State University, and has been teaching at River City for 26 years!

Mr. McKee spends most of his spare time improving the house he and his wife have been working on for 11 years. He is of Scottish and English heritage, and would like to visit England someday. His favorite food, however, is Chinese.

Mr. McKee likes to listen to classic rock and contemporary jazz, and his favorite movie is Groundhog Day. He doesn't like team sports, but he enjoys target shooting.

Mr. McKee would also like to add that he has greatly enjoyed his experiences at River City. He says it has been interesting and fun, and he especially likes his students.

Trilingual student Raider of the Month

October's Raider of the Month is Sarom Phoung. He is a senior at River City High School. During his spare time he reads. His favorite classes are Statistics and AP French, because he likes the teachers who are teaching these classes.

In his future he would like to become a successful prosecutor. After high school he wants to go to the University of California in Davis.

Sarom's favorite food is Round Table Pizza. Event Horizon is his favorite movie. He listens to R&B and rap. His favorite book is Lord of the Flies. He is involved in tennis, Mock Trial, Mulitcultural Club, and Math Club. Sarom can speak Cambodian, English, and some French.

ROP student lands Raider of the Month

Amy Lynch is a senior this year and her favorite classes are ROP (because she gets out of school early) and her class with Mrs. Carlisle, who is her favorite teacher.

Amy is graduating mid-term this year, and is planning to go to community college or to Sacramento State University. She isn't involved in any clubs or sports, but she likes to help out the senior class.

Amy's favorite kind of food is Japanese, and her two favorite movies are Dirty Dancing and Pretty Woman. Amy usually listens to country music or alternative rock.

Amy doesn't have very much free time because she works a lot, but when she does have free time, she spends it with her boyfriend, Peter Ramirez.

Student Senate meets

By Angela Kasting
Staff Writer

On October 9, 1997, River City held it's second student senate meeting of the year. Attendance was low, but Dr. White came and answered many questions on the spot. Many questions were about bathroom conditions. Dr. White said that students were ripping doors off the bathroom stalls. It was too expensive to replace all the time. She suggested we take more pride in our school, respecting it, and she'll work on purchasing more doors.

Questions from the previous meeting were also answered such as having lunch under the trees behind the 50's wing, For now, that idea just cannot be. We don't have enough aides to watch over the snack bar area, quad, halls, and trees.

Still more questions concerning bathrooms were asked by one of our most vocal senators, Justin Mechill. Those questions are being looked into by the A.S.B.V.P., Tony Venditti, and will be addressed at the next meeting.

Rishi Sharma was given the floor to go over Homecoming week. Rishi clarified all rules in question, such as time limits for floats, and regulations; whether they were broken or not. He also re-announced the winners.

The next student senate meeting will be November 13, 1997, during 4th period in the library. Please send one senator per classroom to participate in the meeting.

Are there better ways to spend $400?

From Ms. Ronica Carlisle
Social Science Teacher

Question: How do American public schools react when test scores indicated serious academic failure?

Answer: Cancel class and show a movie.

On Wednesday, October 1, River City High School did just that. Students were dismissed from class to go to the gym and watch a glitzy three-screen music video about trust and thinking.

There were various scenes of teenage life and crisis displayed with advice including a crash course on how to judge character and be a good person. The movie even suggested that students think. This message was communicated by flashing very large multi-colored letters "Think" while simultaneously playing music.

American high schools now dismiss class to replace real thinking with a flashing "Think" sign.

An administrator defended the movie by saying it was only $400.00 and might save a few students.

Anyone with an elementary understanding of economics knows that the cost of the video is much higher than the price tag. Opportunity cost of genuine education is very expensive.

If we could be trusted as a school, we would realize that the opportunity for 1300 students should not be sacrificed for a warm, fuzzy, non-verifiable notion that we might save someone.

During the days when schools behaved like schools instead of crisis counseling centers and recreation departments, we learned about character and trust by reading great literature and history and observing consistent commitment to education.

No wonder the public has lost trust in the public school system--we show their children a movie about trust instead of behaving in a trustworthy manner by providing a quality education.

Don't underestimate the benefit of activities

From Ms. Sandey Green
English Teacher

Music rings through the halls of River City High School. We hear the harmony of many voices, languages, ideas, and points of view. We have inspiring and challenging academic issues, and we participate in a variety of electives, clubs, and student activities. We learn to get along with others in a multitude of ways, and the experiences we share teach us uncounted lessons that may not be measured by how well we perform on a test.

Ralph Waldo Emerson speaks about how we are educated and formed by daily work and daily life. "There is no knowledge that is useless," he says. In this way, we become unique individuals because of our experiences, our relationships, and our perceptions. We learn to take our places in a world where numerous and multifaceted demands are made of us, and we need to be able to draw on a broad spectrum of knowledge to help us make informed and intelligent choices.

Certainly the global community developing in an information age demands that we have good academic skills; but we must also be able to get along well with others. We must be able to sing in harmony with many voices.

The education we receive here at River City is the foundation for future success in a complex world where a cacophony of noise awaits.

Joni's best when "Blue"

By Kendra Drischler
Staff Writer

Ladies of the Canyon (1970, Reprise)
Blue (1971, Reprise)

Joni Mitchell is one of the most influential singer-songwriters of the past thirty years. Her talent and willowy blonde charisma made her one of the biggest stars of the 60's and 70's.

Born in 1943 in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Canada, she began playing the piano as a child and taught herself the ukelele and guitar as a teenager. After a year of art college (she is also a talented painter), Joni dropped out and began performing as a folk singer in the Detroit area.

She moved to New York briefly, then to Los Angeles in 1968, where ex-Byrd David Crosby helped get her first album released. Her next album, Ladies of the Canyon, was a hit. Blue, a year later, was even more successful and has become the album she is most identified with.

Ladies of the Canyon is a kind of timepiece. Joni sings sincerely about love, relationships, and social problems, common themes at the time. She is delicately accompanied by guitars, piano, and the occasional cello or clarinet. "The Priest," has a beautiful minor-key folk melody and explores more romantic problems. "Big Yellow Taxi," recently sampled by Janet Jackson, has a great rhythm and energy. "Woodstock" has a moody, jazzy perfection that beautifully sums up Woodstock and the idealistic mood of the period.

After the success of Ladies of the Canyon, Joni travelled around Europe for a year to get away from her sudden fame and replenish herself and her writing. The result, Blue, is her best album. She said once that it doesn't have a single note of dishonesty.

Every song could be the highlight of another album. The lyrics are poetic and introspective. "I am on a lonely road and I am traveling..." she sings "looking for the key to set me free."

It is a very personal album, like a long letter from your best friend or significant other. It's a stream of consciousness; she's depressed ("Blue"), giddy ("Carey"), lonely ("California"), in love (every song). The accompaniment is sparse and bluesy, never intruding on the main feature of the album: her subtle, inventive, ethereal voice.

Third grade memories

By Lisa Galvez
Staff Writer

The other day I stumbled across a pile of old pictures. I glanced through them and found my third grade class pictures. I was really happy because I was afraid that I had lost them forever.

Looking at the picture brought back so many old memories. Like the friends I had, some of the things I used to do like ride bikes with my friends, and those oral reports I had to do in Mrs. Benson's class, which I dreaded. Those of you who were in my third grade class know what I'm talking about.

Looking back I realize just how simple it all was, the work, the friends. The biggest worry on my mind was getting to the tether ball line first. But most of my memories have faded in time like memories usually do. It's been nine years, although it seems like yesterday.

We all can remember certain things that stand out about elementary school. We often laugh when we look at those old pictures because of the changes we've all undergone.

If you actually take time out to remember those days you will probably feel sad realizing how innocent things were, and how much everybody has changed, and how time has flown by.

Third grade will always be my favorite because this was the year that I came to meet most of my friends that I have grown up with and am now finishing my last year of school with.

Even though no one remembers everything about when they were young, they still have very fond memories. In third grade everybody was more alike than different and now we are more different than alike,and I am sure as I continue through my life I will occasionally think back to third grade, and miss it.

RC at the forefront of new fashion

By Jennifer Bettencourt
Staff Writer

New fashions have rolled onto the campus of River City this year. From net stockings of the rockers to collared shirts of the preppies, students are setting new trends from all areas of fashion. One notices the different groups that stand out by the way they are dressed.

Many students use magazines like YM, Seventeen and Guitar to get fashion tips. Others use their own fashion instinct to show their individuality. Old fashions are dying out. Baggy pants and high hair are no longer cool. Colors for the next season are neutrals. Browns, tans and khakis will get you through the winter.

Students are realizing that the way they dress affects the way they present themselves and the classier they dress the better people will think of them. The way one dresses is very important, whether your clothes come from Goodwill or Nordstorms. The brands don't always matter, it is the way you match them. So remember dress with style and always match. Until our next shopping day. BYE! BYE!

This month's issue: Teens and substance abuse.

Teen Drinking

The stereo blasting...the strobe light flashing...alcohol all around the room. This description probably fits some of the best parties you've ever been to. A lot of teens drink at parties. Unfortunately, too many of them do, and they aren't responsible about it. Drinking can kill you. Blood alcohol poisoning has been the cause of several recent deaths of young people.

These may seem like a few incidents that don't hurt us. Once you drink though, they start to affect you.

Alcohol hurts your ability to think clearly. One major problem with alcohol is drunk driving. It not only endangers drunk drivers, but every person who drives, no matter how careful they are. If people want to drink, that is their choice, until they put other people in danger.

Alcohol is a depressant and slows your ability to react. This is dangerous because when driving you have to be completely alert. Drunk drivers endanger thousands of lives every day. Is this fair?

Many drinkers believe that they are good enough drivers to avoid accidents while drunk, but they are kidding themselves.

The only way to be safe is to not drink at all. So, if you are at a party, consider all the people you are endangering before you take that first drink. Once you take that drink it messes with your head, so you better make sure to consider the risks before drinking. Even if you aren't going to be the driver, be careful to know who you are going to be with so that you have a sober driver.

Drugs Too Easy To Get

Teen drug consumption has gotten way out of hand. These days it is easier than ever to get them, despite regulations and laws meant to restrict and prevent their being sold. Liquor stores have been cited for selling to minors but they often continue to do it for profit.

I see it every day. I go to the liquor store to pick up some soda or chips and kids ask my dad to get them some cigarettes. I'm glad my dad is smarter than to do that for them. If caught he could be put in jail for contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Another trick minors use is getting a friend to buy it for them. This always happens before parties.

I don't understand why colleges let their students have "keggers" when they know most of the students going are younger than twenty-one. Alcohol should be banned on college campuses. Too many students are dying of alcohol poisoning. This needs to stop.

I believe the government needs to control these situations. Alcohol and cigarette laws need to be strictly enforced. Maybe having security cameras around convenience stores would deter minors from trying to buy things illegally.

Rishi's Rhetoric

A great idea was suggested to me about how we can control the traffic in the main hallway. Traffic lights! Yes, I said traffic lights. Now, before you move on to the next article, please hear me out. I really think this could work.

Everyone agrees there is a traffic problem in the main hallway. There is no coordination between people going south and people going north. Instead, there is just a mix-up of bodies, no one knowing where to go. It's even worse at hallway intersections. For this reason, traffic lights would be the perfect solution.

The traffic lights could be situated at those two major intersections in the main hallway, the ones where the teen and 20's wings intersect. They could be set on fifteen or thirty-second intervals. Of course, there would have to be turn lanes and such to ensure against collisions.

Now, how would we monitor these activities? Well, every period some teacher somewhere has a TA. Just give them citation sheets and a vest and let them do the rest. Every time someone violates the hallway traffic laws, he or she is given a citation. One copy of the citation goes to the violator, the other goes to the Discipline Office. Once a person has accumulated a fair amount of citations, say three, they are given an appropriate punishment, like Saturday School.

Along with traffic lights, we will definitely need traffic lines so people clearly know the lane lines. There also needs to be a small space near the lockers so people can get stuff in and out. Finally, I think there should be a car pool lane for all those students and teachers who carry large loads (I mean large carts and an excessive number of book bags!)

Not only would these changes in the main hallway help to alleviate the huge traffic problems being faced by students and staff, we would be giving students first-hand experience with driving. By forcing them to obey some basic traffic laws, we are helping them to later be good drivers. Thus, we are not only helping people now by correcting the traffic problem in the main hallway, we are furthering the cause of education at River City. I am sure the DMV will thank us.

Homecoming 1997

Royalty process more open to all

Marie Vasi and Alejandro Reyes pose with the senior homecoming candidates for a final shot.

By Rishi Sharma
Editor in Chief

Royalty has always been part of homecoming festivities at River City. However, royalty procedures have changed and evolved over time. Homecoming royalty was once the domain of an elite group of football players who chose the homecoming queen and the rest of the homecoming court. Today, the process is clearly more democratic and open to all.

The first step is royalty nominations. For three to five days, members of the Student Council sit in the quad and take nominations from the student body. Regardless of the number of times people are nominated, all names are placed on the master list.

Then royalty checks are conducted. A nominee must have at least a 2.0 grade point average for the last semester, 80% attendance, and no Saturday schools or suspensions. These checks take about a week.

Each eligible nominee must then fill out an application listing awards and activities.

Then a committee of three to five teachers rates the nominee on a scale from one to five based on awards, activities, grade point average, and achievements. The three female nominees with the highest collective score in each grade (except the seniors) are placed on the final ballot. This year, the male with the highest collective score (except the seniors) won automatically, because of the few applications filed by male nominees.

For the seniors, the five female and male nominees with the highest collective scores are placed on the ballot.

Unlike past years, voting now takes place at the Homecoming Dance. Each person votes for his or her class royalty and for senior royalty.

Alumni focus of homecoming

By Simone Sumeshwar
Staff Writer

Oh, the joy of Homecoming. We students know what it means to us, but exactly how did this tradition start? Has it always been this way, or have the traditions changed?

We didn't have homes back then--we lived in caves. So I guess you could call it cavecoming.

The Review staff investigated to find that from Santa Clara to Arizona homecoming has always differed in tradition.

Mr. Engoron said that way back when he was in school they lived in caves and that "cave comings" have lost their meaning since the original homecomings allowed former students to return and participate in games and dances.

Music teacher Ms. Greenwood and our vice-principal Mr. Whittemore both replied that their spirit weeks included dress up days, encouraging students to wear goofy costumes like togas and more. And after the game the"cool" thing to do was go to the ice cream parlor.

Yes, times have changed, yet the tradition has lived on. Homecoming and Spirit Week have come to represent more than a social event.

"It's an activity which promotes school and community pride as well as healthy competition," said Ms. Gossard.

RC Homecoming Spirit Day impressions

Seniors had the quad on Thursday. They were the last to get a turn and did a good job. The quad was flooded in orange. They were loud when they all worked together.

Although the seniors didn't win this year, they put up a good fight.

With an orange safety fence and '98 spelled out in balloons, the quad was bright. The huge banner across one side of the quad was an orange eye-catcher that identified the Class of 1998 for all to see.

They were good competition.

Marsha Russo

Every student and teacher was in awe of the massive explosion of green. The spirit of the junior class was not only evident, but impressive. The cheers could have been a little more organized but that goes without saying for each class.

The Class of 1999 posted tough competition for all classes. A major highhight of the morning was Clifford King in a green dress and nylons. Another dose of kudos must be given to Kathy Clayton for her awesome organizational skills; she was a true asset to the Junior Spirit Day.

Angela Kasting

Tuesday belonged to the Class of 2000. The sophomores decorated the quad all in purple. One especially spirited sophomore, Carl Carter, jumped from a ladder into a blanket, and was tossed into the air by his friends. Randy Brewer and Mario Santos also jumped into the blanket from a ladder.

This year the sophmores banded together and were more unified than last year. This was clear in their organization.

When they were freshmen they proved that they will be a force to be reckoned with.

Irene Hernandez

Screams of "Freshman Power" carried through the crisp morning air. The quad was covered with Turquoise. Streamers lined the trees and posters and balloons were abundant throughout the quad. Memories of past freshmen spirit days with damp streamers and a lone balloons were tossed aside as the students of RC stood by and watched - the amount of freshmen out in the quad cheering was amazing. The class of 2001 would make their mark. They will go far here at River City.

Homecoming Memories

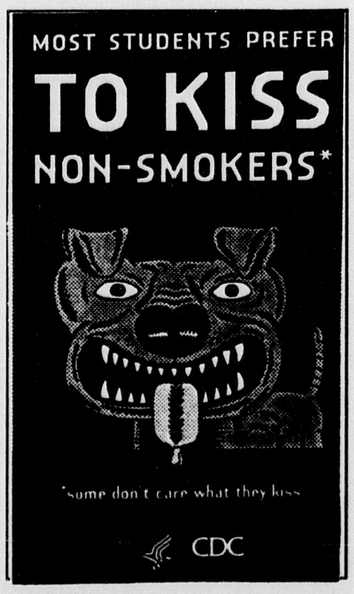

Mr.Miller, math teacher, remembers that Nerd Day was the highlight of homecoming in Holbrook, Arizona.

Mr. Rackley, FLE teacher, remembers sabotaging the freshman floats and cruising around with the girls at Watsonville High School.

Ms. Carlisle, social science teacher, remembers Vietnam War protests.

Ms. Greenwood, music teacher, recalls dressing up on Cross-Dress Day, Hippie Day, and Toga Day.

Ms. Powers, instructional aid, remembers building the freshman float at her house, where she met her future husband while she attended Washington High School (now Golden State Middle School).

Marshall remembered

By Kendra Drischler
Staff Writer

Homecoming Week, 1967: As you walk through the front gate, the sun catches on gold lettering against the brick wall on your right: James Marshall High School. It's Spirit Day and you and the pep club are decorating the quad in support of the mighty wildcats. Enormous blue-and-white banners are everywhere: "Defeat the Devils!" "Marshall Victory!"

Genna Jordan is in the Pep Club, too. She looks very fashionable: a short plaid shift, a white blouse with a Peter Pan collar, low-heeled black sandals, and a black headband holding back her short blonde hair.

Mr. Engoron, the new English teacher, walks by with Principal Lockhart. He isn't quite sure where everything is yet.

All day everyone is talking about the game Friday and the dance Saturday. As always, the Letter Society has nominated mostly cheerleaders and it's collective girlfriends for homecoming royalty.

Friday you cheer hopefully for the Wildcats. They will be better this year! The floats are excellent, taking violence against the Davis Devil to a whole new level, with a hanging, whipping, and even a beheading. The senior float proclaims: "World Unites Over Devil's Death." A devil lies stabbed and two statesmen shake hands surrounded by smiling girls in sashes and costumes-of-many-countries.

The dance is the best ever. A local band, The Heard, plays Beatles songs with all the wild abandon they can summon. Boys wear narrowly-cut suits with skinny ties and girls have on shimmery, empire-waisted dresses with long white gloves and beehives . You feel suddenly pensive while swaying in the dark, wondering, "Will they still be having homecoming thirty years from now?"...

Homecoming Week, 1997: You walk through the front gate and do a double take: "River City?" The "Raiders?" To you it will always be James Marshall. Back-to-school night brings back disjointed, vague adolescent emotions and memories. You do manage to get around the campus, though you have to navigate a third wing, formerly a grove of oak trees.

You recognize a blonde woman introduced as Genna Miller. "Was your maiden name Jordan?" "Yes, it was." "I think we were in Pep Club together!" "Oh, I remember you..."

"Raider" posters decorate the hallways. You pass the gym and think about all the games and dances you went to in high school. Homecoming 1967 suddenly comes to you. Was that really thirty years ago? You remember your naive question the night of the dance. "Yes," you think to yourself, glancing at a particularly glaring Purple Power! poster, "apparently they still do."

Homecoming floats liven up spirit

By Simone Sumeshwar

River City's most creative got together to form four mystical floats for this year's homecoming theme Enchantment Under the Sea. The winners, the freshman, designed their float using Neptune, king of the sea, sitting upon the field in the form of a wave.

The sophomores had their purple dolphin jumping through the goal post while the juniors' green sea monster made a winning touchdown right through the city parade. And don't forget the seniors, whose orange octopus represented their graduation year with its eight legs.

The senior float came in second, the junior float came in third, and the sophomore float came in fourth place in the River City float competition. However, the sophomore float did win the Community Day Parade float contest.

Varsity 1-2

By Kendra Drischler
Staff Writer

Varsity football is now 1-2 in league and 1-6 overall. We lost to Colfax 26-39 last Friday. The team has the ability to win against any team in the league, according to Coach McIntyre, but needs to eliminate mistakes.

The scores of our previous two league games were a win against Marysville 34-8 and a loss to Lincoln, 21-30.

The team has strong players on both offense and defense. Quarterback Gary Herren, receiver Malcolm Floyd, and running back Dominique Alpers have been standouts on offense. Defense is led by linebackers Andy Warmuth and Jeremy Nevis, defensive lineman Justin Deed, and cornerback Brady Tacodol.

The next game will be against Golden Sierra on October 31. The next home game will be against Lindhurst November 7.

Varsity soccer short of goals

By Danielle Meaux
Staff Writer

The junior varsity and varsity men's soccer teams are doing well this year, yet they have a lot to work on. The team has a lot of talented players, but they are not performing up to their ability. "There is a lack of commitment to the sport to compete with other schools," said Coach Restivo.

He said the varsity team has a lot of talented players like Jose Peralta, who is goal keeper and Antonio Esquivel and Francisco Hernandez, who are forwards. However, the varsity team seems to have problems making it to the games, which is why there is always a shortage of players.

Their record is 6-13-1. With a little more commitment the varsity team can step up and play to their capability.

According to Coach Restivo, the junior varsity team, led by key players Jesus Anguela (goal keeper) and Jordan Garcia (midfielder), are very committed and are working very hard. He said they have the potential to be a good varsity team if they keep playing to their potential. Their record this year is 6-6-0.

With a little more commitment and hard work the soccer team will work their way up to the next level of play, concluded Coach Restivo.

This season the offense has been the strong point of the team. Roy Butz has made seven receptions for 68 yards. Aurelio Vasquez has made four touchdowns, Jason Hope has 302 rushing yards and Zafar Niazi has 237 yards passing.

Head Coach Don Brown said, "Defense needs to step up in the last three games. League championship is still possible."

Reactions mixed to "Trust Me!?"

By Angela Kasting
Staff Writer

Last month River City had its annual "big screen" assembly. This year it was all about trust. Perhaps the subject came a little late in our lives. An informal poll was conducted to show the overall opinion of the "Trust Me?!" assembly. Of 56 people questioned, 20 responded positively and 36 thought it was a waste of time.

Although many didn't like it, they were quick to say that the music was good, excluding the Hanson clips.

Becky Knapp, a sophomore, said "Hanson shouldn't be allowed in school or anywhere else, it is cruel and unusual punishment."

But down to the topic, trust. Amy Martinez, a senior, said "If you don't know who to trust by high school, no assembly is going to help you." Many people tended to agree with that.

The film's varied music, movie, and TV clips were used to show how many bad vibes our society has.

Senior Mary Maupin liked the assembly. "I liked dancing to the music; I can relate to it." Lisa Galvez, another senior, thought it showed true-to-life situations.

However, many students would rather have been in class. Senior Christina Harmon compared it to the self-esteem assembly last year, saying, "We won't learn these types of things by an assembly."

The quality of our seating was also mentioned. Freshman Dustin Shaw said he couldn't pay attention because another boy was crammed into his back. Andy Warmuth said that the gym was too hot with that many people jammed in.

Basically students enjoyed the time out of class, but over half would have preferred a more worthwhile presentation.

Senior Steven Negrete even suggested that students vote on whether or not we have an assembly like this.

Basically students enjoyed the time out of class, but over half would have preferred a more worthwhile presentation.

Students are still divided as we read on into the poll. Sophomore Barbara Cobb enjoyed it. She thought it truly got the point across.

Junior Bonnie Sumeshwar thought that if you really paid attention, you could learn a lot.

You may have loved it or you may have hated it. Keep voicing your opinion if you want to be heard.

New driving laws perhaps justified

By Marie Vasi
Staff Writer

Governor Pete Wilson recently signed a bill that will add new requirements for teens getting their first licenses and new restrictions on the freedoms of teenage driving. Starting January 1, teenagers will have to keep a learners permit for six months before being eligible for a license, and 50 hours of practice driving is required instead of the previous 30.

But that's not all. When teens finally do get their licenses, they can't drive with their friends in the car without an adult present for another six months. And they can't drive between the hours of midnight and 5:00 am for the first year.

For the average 15-year-old, that's a lot to handle. Their dreams of driving the night away with their friends have just been shattered. And a lot of teens are upset. I know my sister is. Now only a freshman, she has 50 hours of driving with Mom and Dad to look forward to in another year or so. And I had a hard enough time surviving 30 hours with them. Good luck living through that one, Sis.

But, as an older, more experienced driver (who has had her share of "moments" behind the wheel), I don't think the law is that bad. Statistics show that while teenagers account for only four percent of licensed drivers, they are involved in nine percent of the crashes where the driver is killed, and ten percent of those where a driver is injured. These are pretty scary statistics if you ask me- especially when I'm a part of that four percent. Driving is a big responsibility. I don't want to be on the road with kids who aren't ready to be drivers.

Now sure, driving 50 hours with Mom and Dad will be a pain (I can remember my white-knuckled parents in the passenger seat), and I also know the desire to be in a car full of friends on a Friday night will be strong, but sometimes you have to earn your privileges.

Happy Halloween !
